RAGING FOREST FIRES IN NORTH BREAK ALL BOUNDS

VIRGIN WOODS ABLAZE; VALUABLE TIMBER DESTROYED.

FIGHTERS DRIVEN

Flames, Lashed by Stiff Wind, Leap Trenches and Defy Opposition.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

LAMONT, WIS.—A hundred fire fighters fought today that 500 men are fighting nine fires in the timber belt in the eastern part of Forest county; that six of the fires are under control, and that 27,000 acres of cut-over and timber land have been swept by the flames, which began in the brush and dry timber Saturday. The weather was reported that a mild west wind was blowing at noon, and that he expected the three fires not under control, one of which is threatening the logging camp of the Plummer Lumber company, could be checked before nightfall.

LAONA, WIS.—Fire broke out in the valuable timber holdings north, east and southern of here, at 5 o'clock this morning. It was fanned by a stiff breeze. The flames leaped from tree to tree and within a few hours several acres of the virgin forest were ablaze.

Although shifts of 150 fire fighters had been working all night, the fire which began burning in the brush and dry timber Saturday, could not be controlled.

Bucketing, which was first reported to seemed to have checked the flames yesterday, but early this morning, with the strong wind blowing, the fire jumped over all trenches and forced the valiant fire fighters to take up new posts.

The greatest damage has been done along the Peshtigo river on the holdings of the Plummer Lumber Co., Blackduck. The 200 men on the fire lines were recruited from the company's lumber camps. The efforts are being directed by Peter Cerson, district conservation warden.

The fire in this area is eating its way through a large section of country that is mostly unpopulated and none of the smaller towns of Forest county are in its path of destruction.

So far as could be learned, no isolated homes have been destroyed nor have their been any casualties. The fire-fighting crews are being worked in shifts and but slight progress has been made in the battle to check the rush of the flames.

GRANDMERE, WIS.—Forest fires which for a time threatened settlers and small villages north of here and kept a force of more than 400 fire fighters busy for the past three days, was still out of control this morning. The fires have not reached green timber but has damaged thousands of dollars worth of cut-over lands.

In the immediate vicinity of Grandmere only a few small fires are burning, but the city was in no danger.

STATE APPEALS FOR AID IN BATTING FOREST FLAMES

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

MADISON.—Appeals for cooperation in fighting forest fires which are reported to beraging in northeast Wisconsin were sent today by the state conservation commission to all the chairman, the warden and the Northern Wisconsin Loggers' association.

Instructions were given to fire wardens to use every means to get the fires under control. Reports to the commission said the fires were prevalent, particularly in the forest county, but the warden felt as yet no emergency. The commission also has issued a general appeal to all citizens in the section to assist in the fighting work. C. L. Herring, superintendent of forests, said:

"Although the fire season ordinarily is over by Nov. 1, officials said that because of continued dry weather, a ranger would continue until Nov. 12."

NEW SEAPLANE PILOT KILLED

ECONOMY ADVISORY BOARD IS SOUGHT

Zimmerman Recommends Plan for Eliminating Duplication of Duties.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

MADISON—Creation of a state advisory board to consist of state elective officers and heads of the various state departments, the duties of which would be to work toward the elimination of duplication of effort and expense in the departments, recommended by Secretary of State Fred J. Zimmerman in his biennial report to Governor Blaine, made public today.

The suggestion was made, the report declares, as result of much agitation and discussion of duplication of effort and expense in state departments, leading toward a reorganization of the state departments without the loss of efficiency.

Other recommendations made by Secretary Zimmerman in his report include:

Amendment of the state emergency fund law to prohibit two members of the emergency board from voting funds.

Enlargement of office space for various divisions of the state department.

Legislation regarding reimbursement of state employees who own or lease motor vehicles in duty.

Uniform automobile registration and traffic laws, including an automobile drivers' license law, automobile anti-fraud laws.

Increase in the number of state automobile inspectors.

Payment of the $1,962,700 due to the state for bonds on loans during the Civil War.

Expressed opposition to proposal for creation of a separate motor vehicle licensing department.

TEN MUCH POWER.

Speaking of the emergency fund and the recent supreme court decision upholding authority of two members to vote funds, the report declared:

"This appears to be giving two state officers legislative power with a vengeance, and the law should be repealed or amended to make it less objectionable. No two men should have the power to veto an entire legislative act, except to refuse to sign a bill.

"As a whole, the sentiment for the independent progressive ticket in the east is tremendous. It is particularly noticeable that the small bankers and business men and independent manufacturers are placing their faith in the independent. While the greatest labor in the United States mentioned is solidly back of the progressive movement."

The governor will announce plans for his state campaign tomorrow. He is expected to make several addresses in behalf of his campaign for re-election.

ployee. Referring to a recent communication from the civil service commission, which declared that 'employees should feel as free to dis-

"The report was a complete reversal of the policy pursued by the civil service commission less than a year ago when I was called upon to defend my action in discharging an employee for insubordination, incompetency and inefficiency after filing specific charges against him with the commission.

declares, as result of much agitation and discussion of duplication of effort and expense in state departments, leading toward a reorganization of the state departments without the loss of efficiency."

The report recommended legislation to provide for aid to state agriculture and agricultural sales and placing such aid under direct control of one of the state departments.

MADISON—New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania must be classified as "doubtful" states in the presidential election, according to the Lake Polk-Wheeler ticket, which consists of one or more of the three states, Governor Utzine declared in a statement here today, commenting on his recent tour of eastern states.

While it is not a prophecy my judgment, based on the events at the meetings and general interest shown, indicates that not one of the three candidates can count upon carrying all three states," the statement said. "Each candidate may carry one of the three, but in my opinion President Coolidge cannot carry more than one of them."

"As a whole, the sentiment for the independent progressive ticket in the east is tremendous. It is particularly noticeable that the small bankers and business men and independent manufacturers are placing their faith in the independent. Passive vs. Active Wealth

"MEN who want both to succeed and to render service should strike out on new lines rather than travel the worn paths of accepted success. It requires a better type of mind to seek out and support or create the new —" — Albert W. Atwood.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) always has sought to create the new—to add to the tangible wealth of the community—to make new values, thus leading in service and gaining leadership through service.

Petroleum in the ground is potential and passive wealth. Petroleum on the highways, in service stations, in tractors, trucks and automobiles, is active, usable wealth, rendering a distinct and important service to humanity.

Before the organization of great companies to transport and refine crude petroleum and to make the resulting products available to all the people, this vast, potential wealth was not worth a cent.

Today, with the machinery of industry in place and hundreds of millions of barrels of crude passing in an unceasing stream from oil wells to consumer, this passive wealth has become active—and what was valueless before is now worth billions of dollars.

This is service—the most real and fundamental kind of service. It is service due to leadership—to keeping always "a little in front o' the next." And in return for its part in this service, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has taken but a tiny fraction of the new national wealth which it has created.

GEN. HAAN, HEAD OF 32ND, IS DEAD

Alto about two weeks ago, Mrs. Haan was at his bedside at the time of his death. He was 91 years old.

20 Years of Service

Gen. Haan was retired from active army service Mar. 31, 1922, after 20 years of service. With Mrs. Haan he went to make his home in Milwaukee in 1923, taking up residence at the Hotel Astor. He was a constant demand as a speaker before military and Wisconsin veterans, fraternal and patriotic organizations.

Gen. Haan was the organizer of the Red Arrow division, which made such a notable record on the battlefields of France. After the war he was named corps commander and went into Germany as the first head of the American army of occupation.

Classmate of Pershing.

Born in Crown Point, Ind., Gen. Haan was graduated from West Point military academy in 1887. He was a classmate of Gen. John J. Pershing. Gen. Haan served with distinction in Cuba and the Philippines and was three times recommended for bravely "for conspicuous conduct in action" there. April 9, 1914, he received notice that he had been selected for military for the part he played in fighting against Insurgent forces in the Philippines. Feb. 5, 1919, he was a lieutenant colonel at the time of his retirement.

Opponents of the Thirty-second division say also he was an active worker in the American Legion and in November 1922, enlisted in the Legion's private helper in Wisconsin. He was unattached in his praise of the gallantry of the Wisconsin and Michigan troops whom he commanded.

The fire department used chemicals, playing it on the house which they defended against the flames until 11 o'clock. The heat was intense.

Another part of the mystery is whether Mr. MacDonald himself is convinced of the authenticity of the letter. Some of his friends are represented as saying that he is not so convinced.

One suggestion is that foreign officials, following the routine in such matters, acted without Mr. MacDonald's definite authority.

Everybody is mystified over the attitude of the cabinet members. At least eight of them spoke publicly in regard to it during the week.

On the uncertainty of the documents, some going so far as to say frankly that they believed it to be true.

The anti-government press declared the incident had killed the chances of the laborites being returned to power Wednesday.

MILITIA WAS

TO DEFEND FALL EXPENSES

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS]

LONDON—Nearly 1,000,000 pounds sterling will be required to defend the expenses of the general election.

For the last one, a sum of £22,240 pounds, the largest sum spent for an election in British history, this was 10 times the amount it cost to stage the frequent electoral skirmishes between Gladstone and Conservative and almost twice as much as the election of 1922.

This proved ineffective.

The militia, however, did not turn out in force.

After the election, the government had to pay £1,000,000 to the militia.

Most of the members of the

A bucket brigade being formed by the neighbors, the fire was

Christianity Is Source of Ideals

The world gets its highest ideals from Christianity, and the church, even with its faults, is the organization that mothers all good things in the community, declared the Rev. Robert A. MacMullen in a sermon at the Baptist church Sunday morning on "The Religion That Furnishes the Highest Ideals."

The world admits that Christ was the one perfect man, the minister said, "and a heroic following of his teachings would cure all of the world's ills." There are no people who hold that the individual interpretation of religion is the only one and there are others who hold that the social interpretation is the correct one. Those who hold these separate thoughts do not harmonize, although they should. The idea of the one is heaven for the person and of the other is being born into the multitude. There is no middle ground, for the individual is all important for himself we can have society; we must have socially inclined individuals.

"Talents are developed in solitude, but character is developed in the great paths of life, and if we are to follow the Master, we must mix with the world."

$5,000 LOSS IN SLOAN FARM FIRE

OBITUARY

22-Room Dwelling, Old Land-mark, Is Badly Damaged by Blaze.

One of the old landmarks of Janesville was all but wiped out Sunday morning, when fire swept through the 22-room house on the old Sloan farm on Elmwood Street, just east of the city limits, causing a loss of approximately $5,000. The property is owned by Frank E. Sloan, Chicago, formerly of Janesville, and was occupied by the families of George Davis and Frank Bushaw.

Although it was outside the city, the Janesville fire department responded and made a drive of 742 feet to put in and battle the blaze for more than four hours, using 65 gallons of chemicals and one load of hose stretched from a hydrant 1,000 feet away. The booster pump on No. 1 truck was used to increase the pressure to 100 pounds.

The first call came by telephone at 10:10 a. m., and an error made in receiving or sending the call resulted in the department going to Rayne street instead of Racine street. All but three of the firemen off for the day reported for duty.

Handing out a charge of running his car over the fire hose while the firemen were at work, Harold Dawson was arrested and was fined $27.49 in municipal court Monday.

The department responded to a fire call Saturday afternoon. One was a garage at 12:55 p. m. at the corner of Center and Grand avenues. The second was at 1:55 p. m., a rabbit fire in the rear of the Hayes block, and the third at 2:45 p. m., a grass fire near the Chevrolet club.

Golden Wedding at Tullar Home

EVANSVILLE—Mr. and Mrs. John Tullar quietly celebrated their golden wedding Monday evening at their family home, however, and congratulations. Their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Biedenharn, Cranodon, were out of town guests.

Mrs. Rheta Taggart and John Tullar were married Oct. 27, 1874, by Rev. James W. Harris, pastor of the Congregational church in the home of the bride's parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Taggart. They were attended by the late Mr. and Mrs. William Stevens, pioneers of Evansville.

They went to farming in the Tullar district, settled in their home until 1880, when they retired and moved into their present home on Church street. They both taught school in their youth and have both been especially interested in their community. They are members of the Methodist church.

A. M. Hallan served on the school board for years and Mr. Tullar, a Civil war veteran, served on the county board, 11 years supervisor of the first ward. Mr. Tullar remembers all of the early history of Evansville from the earliest days when the Indians around here did their trading at Union. He was the first clerk in the Grange store, where it was started, but was summoned to Janesville on jury duty and lost his job.

Mr. Tullar's health has not been good this summer, but he has sufficiently recovered to thoroughly enjoy his golden wedding.

Just Begin to Fight?

Surrounded by Santa Anna and his 25,000 Mexican troops at Buena Vista, General Zach Taylor replied to a demand for surrender, "I have just begun to fight."

And with his little band of Americans he won the battle.

The Y. M. C. A. building fund is at the stage where there can be no surrender. This is the day and the hour when the men who believe in Janesville and her future should "just begin to fight."

Whatever one has in this world, that means achievement comes from sacrifice. To some it is greater than to others. This is the time to sacrifice a little. Tomorrow it will be a matter of pride.

Today is the day to build the Y. M. C. A. building.

How come the League of Nations has overlooked proclaiming the millennium?

The Death of Secretary Wallace

Henry C. Wallace has always been a farmer, but not a political farmer. He dug in the soil of Iowa and knew what the actual work of running a farm meant. Later when he wanted to put some of the ideas he had in his mind into circulation he did it through an agricultural paper, bearing a high reputation, as Wallace's Farmer attests.

He graduated from the editorship of that paper direct to the cabinet of President Harding as secretary of agriculture. He has made a good cabinet member. He has been a practical and economical department chief. He has been conservative without being reactionary and it may be said that he was so good an executive that the agricultural department was never in better condition than now.

He was a young man comparatively, only 55. That he and the president differed in some matters of policy it has been said for some time but there has never been any confirmation of this by either the president or Mr. Wallace. It was not believed generally and most of the gossip was from radicals who wanted facts put into effect in handling the agricultural department.

It can be safely understood that Wallace's successor will be some man who will be able to handle the department with the same zeal and discretion as Secretary Wallace.

Governor Blaine thinks Pennsylvania will be for La Follette. We will Texas be for Coolidge by the same sort of prophecy.

A Newspaper Home

The Milwaukee Journal moved to its new and fine building Sunday after a long time of preparation for so gigantic a task. A newspaper must go on like the world on its axis or pass out like an exploding comet. The Milwaukee Journal has not only kept pace with Milwaukee and its growth but has always been a few jumps ahead as becomes necessary in a modern newspaper. The newspaper that amounts to something these days must be more than a purveyor of daily scandal or a vehicle for the dissemination of trifles and jazz literature. It must have a solid basis of ethics, a superstructure of ideals and an objective which may mean profit as a business institution as well as a daily appreciation from the reader for accomplishments. The Journal must have built well on these foundations to be able to have so excellent a home.

It will take the next four years to get his own mud off Wheeler.

The "Peony Man" Is Dead.

The Peony Man is dead. He found time as a busy and successful manufacturer to do something for the human folks among whom he lived. His was an unashamed life. Each year he gave thousands of those magnificent peonies raised in his dream garden near Kenosha to others. He sent them in boxes to hospitals all over the state. He was happy when sharing with others. That was Henry S. Cooper, wealthy man, manufacturer, a preacher's son, establisher of a great industry in Kenosha, a good citizen and man who held his civic relations anything but lightly.

Sol, You've Said It!

Sol Bloom is the stuff! Our new hat is off to Sol and while he is passing by shall remain. All others stand uncovered in his great presence. In this hour of political bunk and when the cat is being let out of the bag every few minutes and proves in most cases to have a white stripe down its back, Sol comes like a welcome rain after a month's drought. He wants the government to take over the national game, appoint a secretary of baseball in the cabinet and make everything regular in politics. In that case all ball players during a republican administration will have to be republicans and when a democrat is president, we will can 'em all again and appoint men but good democrats. We are for Sol's plan. If Brother Charlie is elected president by the Senate we shall ask that Brother Bill be appointed secretary. There will be no monkey business. Our platform will abide with the slogan: "Public ownership of baseball." Government operated ball parks and peanut privileges? And if anybody pays $100,000 for a player the senate will be called upon to investigate. We invite Sol to Madison to place his plan before the Sanhedrin of the Little Incubator

CHESTNUT TREE BLIGHT

By FREDERIC J. HASKIN.

Washington—If Longfellow were writing his village blacksmith poem today he would have to begin it, "Under the blighted chestnut tree" that is, if he were going to write in the manner of the past. The chestnut blight, which C. F. Gravatt, of the Office of Forest Pathology, has called the most destructive tree disease known to science, has left the northeastern states almost without a single spreading chestnut tree. Shortly after the war, a government expert was sent to the woods of New Jersey to see whether any chestnut trees there were alive and bearing. With strong binoculars he scanned the tree tops. His report was that not more than 20 trees were alive and those were infected with the deadly blight.

Since then the blight has made its way rapidly southward into Georgia. Mr. Gravatt says that the chestnut trees of the Appalachians are doomed.

"It has been difficult for some people to realize this," he points out. "When from a mountain top one looks over thousands of acres of vigorous chestnuts, it is indeed hard to believe that within a few years the view will be changed to one of dead and dying trees. Yet the spread of the disease across Virginia is convincing evidence of what can be expected in North Carolina and other states. For a time, the spread of the disease in Virginia was delayed because there was a small state appropriation which was used in cutting out some of the more advanced spot infections. But the work was not completed, and since the states have practically stopped fighting the blight, it will make steady headway."

The United States imported 23,600,000 pounds of chestnuts from Europe last fall. Soon we shall have to look to Europe for our entire supply of chestnuts to roast before the fire and to use in stuffing the Thanksgiving turkey.

More important than the nut situation, however, is the question of timber. In its sweeping advance, the chestnut blight is destroying the valuable chestnut forests of the entire east.

The chestnut is a utility tree. Tannin is obtained from the bark of a number of trees, but in the chestnut the wood as well as the bark is heavily supplied with tannin. This has made the chestnut valuable to the leather industry. Besides, after the tannin is extracted, the chestnut wood can be used for paper pulp. Tall chestnut trunks make especially good telephone and telegraph poles, because the wood resists decay when placed in the ground. The young chestnut trees grow rapidly and are therefore useful around mines where many young trees are needed for props.

Fine chestnut trees have always been in demand as ornamental shade trees. The blight has affected the value of property in many cases in which a house depended on a chestnut tree or two for shade or where an estate or lot had a stand of chestnut timber.

In addition to all this, chestnut wood is of medium fine grade and can be used for a number of purposes. So the destruction of the chestnut forests is proving a sad loss to many people.

The chestnut blight was discovered by a forester in the Bronx Zoological Park in New York in 1904. Evidence found later makes it seem likely that the blight was in the eastern states as far back as 1895, but the fungus had not yet got a running start. It is thought that it came from China or Japan.

The disease attacks no tree except the chestnut, but its effect on this tree is almost invariably fatal. A tree may survive for three or four years, even for ten years, but sooner or later it dies, healthy, strong looking trees apparently have no more resistance than weak saplings.

In 1908 some one estimated that the loss from chestnut blight in and around the city of New York was almost $1,000,000. By 1911 the loss to the eastern states had amounted to $25,000,000 according to a conservative estimate.

The federal government and some of the states, notably Pennsylvania, tried to fight the disease by turning the spotlight of scientific investigation on it, but investigations have shown no practical way of immunizing a forest. A small canker which appears on a valuable tree may be cut away by a competent tree doctor and the tree may recover if it is not attacked further. This sort of surgery is so impractical as to be hopeless where any number of trees are concerned.

Dr. Caroline Rimbault tried immunizing trees by injecting chemicals into the cells in the trunk, but her experiments indicated that a tree could be rendered resistant to the disease for a few months, just as a human being can be made resistant to smallpox for a few years by vaccination. This immunity was not considered a successful solution of the problem, because of its temporary nature, and because the chemical treatment, like surgery, could not be applied to forests.

Nor is there any known way of effectively destroying the spores. Most of the tiny spores released by the fungus die without accomplishing any spread of the disease. Yet so many billions are released from infected trees that ultimately all of the trees in a section are attacked.

There are two kinds of these spores, either one of which can start an infection. Both kinds are invisible to the eye. The smaller type is so tiny that a single spore would have to be magnified 50 times to be seen. This smaller and commoner kind is produced in the sticky "tendrils" which form on the smokery. Many of the tiny spores stick to the feet of birds and insects. Migrating birds carrying spores may be responsible for the strange long-distance jumps of the destructive blight. The less common, non-sticky type of spore is thrown out directly into the air and carried off by the wind.

The chestnut blight is, roughly, like a disease of human beings. It attacks the bark of a tree, where a slight wound affords an opening for the spores. Here they germinate, producing a cancer on the trunk. A depression or swelled place on the bark may be the only local evidence of the blight. Like a ringworm, the cancer spreads around the trunk until the tree is girdled. Then the part above the girdled area dies, because the disease has cut off the sap flow from the roots, and gradually the entire tree dies.

In the United States there is only one species of chestnut, though there are several varieties of the related chinquapin. Other countries have many more types of chestnut. The chestnuts of China and Japan, and perhaps those of Java and India, fought the blight centuries ago. The weak types disappeared, and those which could fight the infection survived.

The difficulty with the most promising of the oriental chestnuts is that they do not always withstand heavy frosts. By crossing them with the American species it may be possible to combine resistance to frost and resistance to blight. If, in addition, such a tree had good timber qualities and the nuts have the fine flavor of the American chestnut, a tree to replace the native chestnut will be found.

Mr. Davis continues to speak for Japanese reviewing our immigration laws.

The mayor of Franklin Grove, Lee county, Illinois, resigned because he said the people were "not civilized." It was never thought here in Wisconsin that a part of the job of the mayor was to civilize his people.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

AN EMPTY HOUSE
An empty house, an empty house, with every spirit gone.

The cradle of a thousand dreams when youth was at the door.
But now the young have grown so old and all the dreams' old.
Death is at its pillars now, despair at every pane, and where the children romped in play the bats, nocturnal, reign.

The drama of all human life those crumbling walls have seen.

For once that house was young and strong and once its floors were clean:

And then within that upper room, as once at Bethlehem,

The miracle of birth occurred, a child was born to them.

Then joyous dancing up the steps, and laughing merrily within.

But now the roof which sheltered them is slowly tumbling in.

The newness of an empty house so desolate and bleak.

But what this thought occurs to me: If those old walls could speak.

What tales of love, and hope, and care, and sorrow they could tell!

For once that was a home of pride, where people used to dwell:

Who was the first to tread the walk, the last those steps to climb.

And leave in grim despair that house unto the grave of time?

HOROSCOPE

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1924.

Astrologers read this as a very doubtful day for while Mars and Mercury are in benefic aspect, Jupiter, Saturn and Venus are strongly adverse.

The new Moon of this date is read as presaging an evil influence that may cause much mortality among the people.

Discontent and privation probably will be more widespread than at any time since the war.

Workers should be especially careful to avoid accidents and to make the best of everything for there is an ill omen that appears to bring about industrial troubles.

Jupiter is in an aspect favorable for business and men of wealth who maintain large business interests, but there is to be great waste of public money.

Theft, crime and forgery are denoted with a strange apathy on the part of guardians of the peace.

Corruption among public officials may be incurred at this time when there appears to be immunity from punishment and lack of interest in safeguarding the people.

Such rainfall and even floods may be expected in the next month in many parts of the country.

California and other western states that have suffered from drought probably will have rather a wet winter.

News that will cause militiamen to rejoice may be expected at this time, which will be discouraging to pacifists.

It will be remembered that warlike demonstrations were prophesied long before Defense Day was contemplated. Now international complications are sharply indicated.

Venus is an aspect that denotes scandals in high places both here and abroad. The death of a king or a ruler is signified in this junction.

People born in this year may expect an event of supreme importance.

Children born on this day are likely to have many ups and downs in life. These subjects of Scorpions are usually clever, quick, alert and gifted, but inclined to blunder into bad luck.

HOPES FOR RESTORED SANITY

Let us hope that after the campaign sophistry has died common sense will return. There should be less crudity and more reasoning.

People who affect to believe that wages can be higher and commodity prices lower and that the government has some small power to make everyone rich with a wave of the hand and the same reduce taxes should be made to realize the error of their ways. Perhaps it is too much to expect that the time-serving politicians will hereafter refrain from promising to get the moon for overgrown children who cry for it. Show and Leather Reporter.

The Wrath to Come

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Copyright, 1924, by Little Brown & Co.
At a few minutes after ten the train from the portland of the Gay Lady and the last of a little stream of tradespeople were leaving the yacht. There was the usual crowd of loungers upon the dock to watch the departure, and on the bridge Lord Yeovil and Grant were standing at either side.

"If anything could induce me a convert to your somewhat alarmist point of view, Shatley, Blum's behavior last night would do it," the former acknowledged, after a little desultory conversation upon the events of the evening before. "I still don't understand what was at the back of his mind."

"I can tell you," Grant said. "You'll find a copy of that speech will appear broadcast throughout America. Cornelius Blum, the great shipping magnate, entitling himself Minister of Great Britain to call him, has agreed to the United States to join the Pact of Nations. That's the sort of headline you'll see in every paper which counts. Every word he said will appear verbatim. It's wonderful propaganda for Germany."

"He stole a march on me. I'm afraid," was the somewhat rueful admission.

"Never mind," Grant consoled him. "We've won the first bout, after all, and Blum knows it. For all his carefully laid scheme to prevent it, America is invited to the Pact of Nations. Now we'll have to strip for the second bout. We shall have to fight like hell to get that invitation accepted. You don't follow our domestic politics, I expect."

"How can I?" Lord Yeovil protested. "It's probably enough for one man to distract all the time."

"The opinion of the educated and intelligent citizens of the United States upon any vital subject," Grant expounded, "is sometimes, unfortunately, an entirely different matter to her voting force. This is our only danger, I suppose. Blum and his friends will be sure that if America accepts the invitation of the Pact, all those grandiose schemes which have been formulated and brought to maturity by Germany and her friends fail to the ground. This is essential to the world's indefinite period of time. Germany must abandon her hope of revenge. Japan must renounce herself to the permanent subordination of the yellow races. Therefore, strenuous efforts will be made in America to prevent her becoming all that.

"I can quite believe that," Lord Yeovil assented. "The peace lover will have German-American interests and the Japanese influence to fight. Still, it can't help thinking that on a question like this, the common sense of the country will carry all before it."

"I am with you there," Grant agreed, "and yet it is a fact that there have been, even within my memory, laws passed by the legislature which were in absolute opposition to the will of the people. The voting power of Americans is a negligible and temporary unimportant quantity, one friend Blum will be over there before a month is passed. Prince Luttrell will be visiting at Washington. I shouldn't be surprised if Baron Funderstrom takes a little tour there too. Headquarters will be moved from Monte Carlo to Washington and New York, and we haven't any reasonable means of coping with all the flagrant, misleading propaganda which will be used to induce America to refuse this invitation within the next few weeks. The only hope is that there may remote chance one of us is able to discover proof of the subsequent intentions of Germany and her friends. Otherwise, I honestly believe that there is a serious possibility that the United States, in the most extreme possible tones, will decline your invitation."

"If they do," Lord Yeovil remarked grimly, "I must resign at once from my position as Chairman of the Pact and withdraw from the Presidentship of Great Britain. A Member of the Board of Directors, circumstances would be little less than an affront. You have this matter very much at heart, Grant."

"I am proud of my country," Grant answered, "I pose as being an Englishman, but I know I'm not. I never worked so hard in my whole life as when I was Second and eventually First Secretary, or went through so many disagreeable moments as I have during the last eighteen months. I don't fancy my next six months will be any easier. I am going to do my best to bring the truth home to the American public."

HAVE COLOR IN CHEEKS

Be Better Looking—Take Olive Tablets

If your skin is yellow—complexion looking. If your complexion is pale, use pink powder or rouge. Meanwhile, build up your blood so that color comes naturally and not artificially. Diet if your skin is bad; powder to keep your complexion smooth and soft. You have never neglected the back of your neck when you eat either cold cream or powder; your neck needs treating too.

Never spend less than five minutes a day on your finger nails and manicure thoroughly once a week. With a little attention to your fingers and elbows as well, say twice a week, you should look perfectly presentable at all times.

Anxious Reader: The tiny watery pimples that come out over your face and body must have been the result of thy poisoning.

Ether Gas: For the oily skin and blackheads try the following mixture and put it into small cheese cloth bags, a teaspoonful to a bag, to use instead of soap. To a pint of oatmeal, of the old-fashioned kind, add three pinches of powdered benzoin and a teaspoonful of shaved castor soap.

Some times it will apply directly to the skin, after removing the blackheads, massage with a cleansing cream to dissolve the oil, and close pores again with very cold application.

YOUR BABY and MINE

Mrs. A. F. J. Your twin months old baby has made its spinal gains. It should sleep normally every four hours. The baby evidently is easily satisfied with your milk because she goes all night without nursing. Try one tablespoon of water before a nursing. Give it from a spoon and not from a nipple.

Mrs. A. S. D. The baby is getting along fine. Don't dream of trying to remove the hair from the baby's face. This is perfectly natural and will go away of itself. You will certainly have trouble on your hands if you try to remove it.

Mrs. R. F. E. Most children are troubled with the milk crust problem. We are so careful of the soft spot that we fail to give it much cleansing. Rub it daily with warm olive oil and keep it cleaned this way. Do not comb or scratch off the scales. This makes it worse.

I should try feeding the baby only every four hours and think then that she will be hungry enough to stay awake for her feed. Keep shaking her gently so that she takes it all. If babies are given the bottle and put it down over it, but if they are held on the lap and kept awake until they have finished they will sleep much longer. She is old enough to wear the knitted band with a nipple.

Mrs. A. S. D. Another 11 weeks-old baby is a spunkie baby. I would not bother about forcing water, by no means sweeten it but try giving a few spoonfuls of it from a spoon and not a bottle. If the baby is constipated you can start orange and prune juice at any time, but unless this is present three to four months is early enough for the breast fed baby.

Mrs. R. F. E. I should nurse the two months old baby only once every four hours. Having gained so tremendously there is no doubt but that the constant vomiting is merely due to too much food. Cut down the nursing period to 10 minutes every four hours.

pass the time away. He did not ask to write to me, but he came to see me the night before I left. Would it be wrong to send him a Christmas card?

NOBODY'S SWEETHEART. If you send the boy a Christmas card you will be making advances. It is really his place to make that. Christmas cards however, are often done over very often thrown to the winds to admit of a more generous and friendly spirit. Since the young man showed a decided interest in you while you were in his town, he would probably be glad to get your card and would not feel that you were running after him. If you set out to be quite genuine with your feelings, nothing can be done in an evening as enough. With you do not like. Conditions of life are rarely perfect and one disadvantageous thing or another has to be avoided. You do not like to be seen with your girl. In my estimation a hundred to the man a girl loves would be preferable to any young man who chases her.

PARKING WITH PEGGY

By ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Letters May Be Addressed to Mrs. Thompson, In Care of the Gazette.

PORRIDGED FREEDOM

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl 15 years old. All summer I stayed with my mother. Now I am staying with my father in another town. I don't want to stay here because my mother and father have never talked to any one. It is a very small town with no place to go. My father will not allow any girls to come to see me. He won't let me talk to them. He never lets me go anywhere unless he goes along. The rest of the girls go and have fun. I have to leave my home because my mother won't allow my big sister to come to see me. I cannot go to town to work because I am not old enough. I know I cannot stand it here all winter.

When I stay with my mother I do not like to go to school which I do not like. Could I get a job to school? What should I do?

TAX PUBLICATION AFFECTS CAMPAIGN

New York Business Gets Severe Jolt; Mellon Is Criticized.

By DAVID LAWRENCE,
Copyright, 1924, by the Janesville Gazette—Special Correspondent.

New York.—The nervous system of America's largest financial and business city has had a shock over the publicity of income tax payments which has a distinct bearing on the political campaign. Why did Secretary Mellon permit the publication of the figures at this time? Did he hope to give the American business community the leadership of the pro-Teapot Dome type of legislation, believing that money would be contributed not only for the success of the republicans but also to keep out the publican congressmen to prevent the law?

So far as this correspondent could determine by inquiry from here to the White House, the plan to make public the payments has long been in process and developed in no small degree in the treasury department. Business men to whom this explanation was given, however, were bitter in their comments on the invasiveness of the move, they said, for instance, that the law did not specify any particular date for the publication so long as it was within the year.

Under the circumstances, the treasury could have waited until the end of December, meanwhile appealing to congress at the December session or even sooner, by special session, to amend this and other laws requiring immediate action, where there is substantial doubt as to the validity of the section of the law. Democratic voters could be counted upon. The difficulty at the time the measure was adopted was that it could not be easily divorced from other parts of the law. It was used as a means of trade with the radical and democratic. Once before, during the 1920 campaign, it would have been a better chance of being voted upon on its merits.

The business world is accustomed to think of the administration at Washington as safe and as likely to give as little trouble as possible. The recent action of the treasury in taking a step which was not necessary at this time has therefore excited wonder and provoked much discussion as to what political purpose could be served that would be greater than the disadvantage incurred.

For instance, the laudable people have been trying for several weeks in the campaign to make the little one between the rich and the poor. They have not succeeded, but there's ammunition adored in the lists of income tax payments, for according to the radicals, the making of large sums of money is unjustified from any standpoint.

Labor, which has been clamoring for increases in wages without particular regard to whether a proper return on the investment was made now can hardly the figures about in labor contracts. The bulletin was just about to settle down to its ease and quiet. The fact that part of the returns are made public and the details withheld tends to all sorts of unwarranted inferences. A man who is reckoned as paying less than two thousand dollars in taxes, but is held upon with suspicion, is he evading his taxes? He may have sustained heavy losses in some enterprises or he may put his money in tax-exempt securities. But the information is not available without position unless he explains. An explanation of book-keeping transactions are often too technical to be convincing.

Why did they do it? The administration drifted into the thing without much thought one way or the other. The radicals are convinced the conservatives in the legislature are ganging because the leadership of the latter was shabby. The radicals this time are predicting by the mistakes of the conservatives. And as for the report of the law, it has been made twice as difficult now that the radicals are less able to support it. Set up dissatisfaction by discussing the income tax payments of capitals of American industry.

Had there been any announcement in advance of the treasury's intention or even a request from the executive of congress after the election for a report of the law, then perhaps we have developed a public opinion against the present section of the law and its repeal. As it is, the situation has become so confused that the administration will find itself at the next session on the defensive against moves to make public all the details of income tax returns.

SCHOOL TUITION CASE FOR JUNIOR H. S.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

Madison—A city school district that has eliminated high school but does maintain the ninth, eleventh and twelfth grades of school may charge tuition for the actual number of weeks a non-resident pupil attends school, Assistant Attorney General Levitan today advised State Superintendent John Callahan. The opinion in effect holds junior high schools may charge tuition. The board of education has to act now to charge tuition to the parent of the non-resident student for attendance at a summer session, however, the ruling said.

In the opinion to Superintendent Callahan, the legal department advised that failure of the school board to enter into a contract regarding payment of tuition does not defeat the rights of the district to institute an action for such tuition on an implied contract.

WILL FILL JOBS AFTER ELECTION

Important State Appointments to Be Made by Blaine.

Madison—Important political developments in Wisconsin are expected to take place immediately following the general election on Nov. 4, according to political leaders here. Several important appointments are anticipated to be made and Governor Blaine, it is expected, is prepared to take up matters which temporarily were dropped from the campaign.

Of primary importance is the appointment of a state engineer to succeed the Rev. L. Macel, Arthur Peckham, state architect, was appointed temporarily to the position by the state railroad commission. A permanent appointment will be made shortly after the election. It is understood recommendations of the railroad commission are in the hands of Governor Blaine, who has approved C. D. Larson, chief engineer of the railroad commission, frequently mentioned for the position.

Who After Hirsh? On the appointment of the state engineer follows the appointment of state highway engineer to succeed A. H. Hirsh, who recently resigned as candidate for governor against Governor Blaine. J. T. Donoghue was appointed temporarily to the post and may be the permanent appointee. Although the highway commission has power to make the appointment, it must be approved by the engineer.

The secretary of the state fair to succeed Oliver Remey also will be named immediately following the general election. Out of more than a score of applicants a field of four or five have been chosen and the new secretary will be named from this group.

The question of removal of W. O. Hotelikis, state geologist, on charges submitted to the geological board by Governor Hirsh also will come to the front shortly after Nov. 4, it is believed. The geological board is expected to set a hearing date on the matter shortly, at which time Mr. Hotelikis, who also is chairman of the state highway commission, will be given an opportunity to explain the charges against him. This matter has a direct bearing on the state highway situation since the geologist is a member of the highway group.

SEVERSON CASE AGAIN.

Any new move in the case of State Auditor George Severson who recently resigned as a member of the state free library commission caused a demand of Governor Blaine to appear and give information regarding charges of corruption in state offices, also are likely shortly after the election, over, close administration of state affairs.

A number of other changes in the personnel of state departments have been reported as likely during the next few months but no definite announcements have been made on these.

Life Is Worth While if old folks are well

To be well, avoid chronic constipation. The laxative for old people is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

It would be of great benefit to elderly people if they realized that all their complaints are aggravated by constipation, as constipation is a form of congestion that affects the brain, nervous and muscular systems.

Headaches develop, aches and pains become worse, and rheumatism more painful. If you keep your intestines free from poisons you will find yourself happier and without those disorders usually associated with advancing age.

The fact is elderly people need only a mild, simple laxative. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is gentle in action and free from griping, a vegetable compound of Egyptian senna with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. Use it awhile and you will soon be able to dispense with medicines of all kinds.

More elderly people use Syrup Pepsin than any other laxative, and
